

VCA 2015 - JURY'S CITATION

2 X HONOURABLE MENTIONS

Team A ETH - Towards a collective waterscape.

The design displays extraordinary professionalism and capacity. It is giving answer with insufficient questions.

Team A NUS - Colla-boratory

This scheme shows critical and creative thinking bringing theory and democracy together. And giving question with insufficient answers.

THIRD PRIZE

Team A Tsinghua University - Pigeon City

The design is a poetic metaphor about relationship to nature. It is a committed, laudable and rigorous interpretation of tower and park morphology bringing it for 21st century. It is delivered with appropriate rendering. Every drawing is an argument to convey a comprehensive intention and discussion of co- habitation.

SECOND PRIZE

Team A University of California Berkeley - Quarry Shores

The design is extraordinary and rigorous. It shows very clear presentation of ideas with a critique on democracy and process of procurement and funding.

FIRST PRIZE

Team A University of Pennsylvania - Third Reserve

The scheme has a strong intellectual position. It is visionary yet real for the whole island. The design shows an impressive development of public space and architecture. There is clarity in the production of information and finesse in execution. Jury recommends the team's proposal for Singapore to consider seriously, that is to have the site as Third Reserve.

FEEDBACK ON RESEARCH POSTER

For the research poster competition, there is no award. The jury laments the seemingly misunderstanding of a "research Poster". Research is not just a relentless information gathering and presentation. It needs intellectual positioning of an idea and the need to edit. The graphic quality of the posters is lacking. There is a need to consider much less is more as an effective approach.
